The Department of Family and Consumer Sciences held a mandatory anti-racist training for all department faculty via Zoom. After the training there were mixed feelings among the staff which resulted in the department offering a Diversity Inclusion (DEI) Day.

The idea came about from Dr. Brown during one of the department's DEI committee meeting. Dr. Brown and Dr. Roy worked with the department and campus community to offer a DEI day that was open to both faculty and students.

The event was well attended, 50 faculty, lecturers and staff members attended. And a separate session was held for students, over 80 students were in attendance.
